Thousands of acres are under water from one to four feet deep, and the country presents the appearance of a vast lake. All the small grain which was yet left in the field is totally destroyed wherever the water has run The situation to-night is probably the most serious in the history of the city. The water has fallen nearly a foot at Bridgeport since last night, but between here and there is a rise varionsly estimated at from 6 to 18 inches. In case this continues, much more property will be destroyed. The cellars to every business house in the city and that of the National Hotel are looded, despite the strenuous efforts to pump the water out. In Oakdale Park, where 10,000 people met at the Pennsylvania reunion but five days ago, there is now several feet of water. Much alarm is felt and great excite-

The Carnegie Company at Homestead paid out on Saturday $110,000 in wages to their men. This showed an advance of $11,000 that goes to labor because of the recent increase in wages. All this was under the Wilson tariff. The Carnegie works had quite a different experience in 1892, under the McKinley law, at a time when the Wilson tariff was not dreamed of, and five months before the election of President. There was a reduction of wages and a proscription of labor organizations under the McKinley tariff. Wages advanced under the Wilson laid a large portion of the corn by in tariff. The workingmen are sizing up the situation. They are getting years of McKinleyism, and besides estaurant and also a butcher shop in that the purchasing power of their wages has been materially increased.
